World Skills – Skills change lives

Young people are amazing, right? We get things done. But it's really hard out there now. And the workplace is stacked against so many of us due to race, gender and where we live. What are we supposed to do?

At WorldSkills we believe what young people need to be able to survive, and thrive, is skills. Skills matter! They change lives by building self – esteem and releasing potential. They open up opportunity and connect communities. At WorldSkills we've built a movement that's changing young people lives through skills. Reaching two thirds of the world's population, it's a movement of change. We create this change by inspiring young people to develop a passion through learning a skill, or pursuing excellence, at one of our skills competitions. We develop these skills, helping to raise global standards in training and industry engagement. Our young people connect globally and develop skills together.

We influence government and educators through international cooperation and research, building a global platform to champion skills! We're creating measurable impact at every level, building the confidence of hundreds of thousands of young people, empowering communities and fueling local and international economies. Look, we know things are tough, so if you want to change your life and that of your community and country – get involved with WorldSkills now! Join us and be one if the millions of young people changing their lives with the power of skills.

A New Look At Skills, 2015: 39-IT Network Systems Administration

IT Network Systems Administration services are critical today for the organization and operation of business, industry, and government. A Systems Administration may apply a broad skill set or may choose to specialize among IT services. These include design, system installation/upgrading, troubleshooting, configuration of system and network devices, and user support.

Competitor must perform installation, configuration and upgrading of four modules. The first module focusses on Linux Environments, the second on Windows Environments, and the third on Cisco Environments. In the final module, Competitors are tested on troubleshooting and handed additional surprise challenges. Throughout these modules, Competitors will be tested on Routing and Switching. They will also address Security, Wireless, and Voice. Desktop Infrastructure and Server Infrastructure are further skills assessed during World Skills Sao Paulo-2015.

Electrical Installations

Electrical installations is closely associated with other parts of the construction industry. Electricians work in a range of commercial, residential, agricultural, and manufacturing environments. They will plan and design, select and safely install a reliable system. They also commission, test, program, maintain electrical systems to relevant standards; they also requires diagnosis, reporting, and repair of any system malfunctions. The test project consists of three modules.

Module one requires programming of a small smart relay. This is installed on three walls and the ceiling of the Competitor's cubicle. This job features home and building automation devices, limited to manual functions only. Competitors must tackle lighting circuits, power outlet circuits, installation of distribution boards and protection equipment.

Module two is a programming exercise controlling lighting, dimming and blind control.

Module three is installation testing. One set of faults will be selected at random for use. This installation consists of two sections. Section one will be supplied with an extra low voltage supply and can be tested live. Section two will receive no power. A total of 10 faults are installed. These will include incorrect timer settings or overload settings, short circuit or open circuit faults.

At the completion of C4 the Competitors will see the installed faults.
